BELONGING TO HIS GRACE

THE DUKE OF WESTMINSTER, K.G.

London:
PRINTED BY SAMUEL GOLBOURN, 66, WHITCOMB ST., LEICESTER SQ., W.C.

MDCCCLXXX.

THE Original Collection of Paintings in the Grosvenor Gallery was commenced about 1755 by Richard, Earl Grosvenor, at Millbank House, Westminster, which was built by Charles Mordaunt, Earl of Peterborough, about the year 1720, and is now pulled down.

In 1806 the Family removed to Grosvenor House, and in the same year Robert, first Marquess of Westminster, then Earl Grosvenor, added the Collection of Mr. Ellis Agar.

Numerous additions have since been made.

2. — BENJAMIN WEST, P.R.A.

Born 1738, died 1820.

DEATH OF GENERAL WOLFE.

Death of Major-General James Wolfe, after defeating the French army under the Marquis de Montcalm, on the heights of Abraham, near Quebec, on the 13th September, 1759.

The wounded officer, standing on the right of General Wolfe, is Major-General Monckton, second in command, who was shot through the lungs, but lived many years afterwards. Mr. Adair, the surgeon, at his left, and Captain Hervey Smith at his right, are supporting Wolfe. Immediately behind him is Colonel Barré, and Colonel Williamson is next to the officer with the colours. Colonel Debbing is behind General Monckton; and Sir William Howe, in the uniform of a native regiment, is pointing to the enemy's colours which have just been taken.

Cunningham, in his Life of West, calls attention to a fine stroke of nature and poetry, in the Indian warrior intently watching the dying General, to see if he equalled in fortitude the children of the desert.

Painted for the first Earl Grosvenor.

42. — PAUL POTTER.

Born 1625, died 1654.

LANDSCAPE.

View of a dairy-farm near the Hague, with its adjoining meadows, on a hot afternoon.

Cattle are dispersed in front of a farmhouse, under the lengthening shadows of a row of pollard willows. A girl, milking one of the cows, is talking to a herdsman; and a gentleman, and lady with a fan, are walking under the willows.

In the distance is a château, with numerous cattle in the meadows.

It is worthy of remark that, after a lapse of nearly two hundred years, the scene remains in the same state as when Paul Potter painted it. The château with its turret, in the distance, is scrupulously preserved unaltered with reference to the fame of this picture. It belongs to a friend of Mr. Crawford.

This picture somewhat resembles one by the same master in Lord Ashburton's Collection. It is signed, and dated 1647, when Paul Potter was twenty-two and was painted for his patron, M. Van Slingelandt of Dort. When the famous Slingelandt's Collection was sold in 1785, it was bought for 8010 florins (£750); at the sale of the Tolozan Collection it was sold for 27,050 francs (£1082); and it subsequently became the property of Mr. Crawford of Rotterdam, who bought it for £1350.

In 1806 it was bought in at a sale, in London, for £1552; and soon after the first Marquess of Westminster obtained it for £1000. Panel.

Watson Taylor, at whose sale, in 1822, it was purchased by the first Marquess of Westminster.

PORTRAIT OF MRS. SIDDONS AS THE TRAGIC MUSE.

Full-length, seated on a throne in the clouds. Behind her stand two mutes, one representing Remorse, holding a bowl, and the other Pity, with a dagger dropping blood, the insignia of Tragedy.

When looking at this painting at Grosvenor House, Mrs. Siddons mentioned to the Rev. John Sandford that Sir Joshua having observed to her, as she rose from the last sitting, that he intended to work considerably more on the face, she told him she considered it could not be improved; and on showing her the picture when finished, he said he had taken her advice, and had not retouched the face since she last sat for it.

Painted in 1784, when Mrs. Siddons was in her twenty-eighth year, for M. de Calonne, at whose sale it was bought by Wm. Smith, Esq., M.P. for Norwich, for £700. Mr. Watson Taylor next purchased it for £900, and at his sale in 1822, it was bought by the first Marquess of Westminster for 1760 guineas. Sir Joshua's name is written on the hem of the drapery.

A great number of repetitions of this subject exist. Raffaelle repeated it himself with alterations in his beautiful "Vierge au linge," now in the Louvre—which is distinguished from this by the clasped hands of the kneeling figure of St. John. There is also a picture of the same subject at Munich.

THE ISRAELITES GATHERING MANNA IN THE WILDERNESS.

The twisted columns and the figure of the woman, with a basket on her head, are imitated from Raffaelle's cartoon of "The Beautiful Gate."

This large painting and its companions, Nos. 114 and 115, belong to a series of nine which were painted by Rubens, when he was in Spain in 1629, by order of Philip IV., who presented them to his minister, the Duke d'Olivarez, to decorate a convent of Carmelites which he had just completed at the small town of Loeches, near Madrid.

Seven of them were taken away from the Convent by the French in 1808. The other two, "The Triumph of the Church" and the "Victory of Christianity over Paganism," still remain there.

While they were being borne off, the waggon that held them broke down in a muddy ditch, and some of them rolled out into the water. One, "The Triumph of Charity," was seriously injured, but was repaired, and in 1830 was in the possession of Mr. Joshua Taylor.

Two others, "The Triumph of the Christian Religion," and "Elijah fed by the Ravens," were presented to the French Commandant at Loeches, in consideration of the assistance he rendered in their removal.

The remaining four were purchased by M. de Bourke, the Danish Minister at the Court of Madrid, who brought them to England, and sold them, in 1818, to the first Marquess of Westminster.

LANDSCAPE.

Laban seeking his household gods in Jacob's tent on the Mount of Gilead. Numerous cattle are distributed about. Rachel is represented as sitting upon the secreted images she had carried off, and excusing herself to her father for not rising. The tender-eyed Leah is behind, leading her children, and Jacob is showing Laban round the tent.

Painted for the Marquis de Villamanrique, from whom it passed to the Marquis de Santiago, at Madrid.

It was purchased from the Santiago family, and brought to England, during the first French revolution, by Mr. Coesveldt, about the year 1810; when it was bought by the first Marquess of Westminster.

The subject first intended for this picture was the life of David, with the landscape, or background, to be put in by Iriarte of Seville.

Murillo wished Iriarte to make the landscapes, that he might insert the figures afterwards. On the other hand, Iriarte contended for having the figures put in first by Murillo. To get rid of this difficulty, Murillo executed the whole himself, taking the scene from Jacob's history instead of David's.
